

Extinction (T. Volk)

One ancient day, dinosaurs fade.
Their good-bye, was a big rock from the sky.
The dinosaurs are gone. But do we care?
'Cause we're the mammals
With the run of the world, and plenty of hair.

Chorus:

Oh yeah, there's extinction.
Yes, there's extinction every day. (All the time.)
Oh, there's extinction.
Yes, there's extinction every way. (Happens anytime.)

Passenger pigeon, Dodo bird.
Only exist now, in image and word.
Those birds area gone. But do we care?
'Cause we're the humans
With the run of the world, and we live everywhere.

Myceanean Greek, Apalachee.
Once were common, now they're history.
Those languages are gone. But do we care?
'Cause we speak English
With the run of the world, and plenty of hair

Chorus

Where are the humans? Bitten the dust.
We're so very thankful, they created us.
The humans are gone. But do we care?
'Cause we're the androids.
With the run of the world, and beyond compare

The humans had brains, with lots of cells.
We put the humans in zoos, they didn't do so well.
The brains are gone. But do we care?
Evolution moves on, now it's our turn we're here.

Chorus
